some to the nation.

The only protest heard during the course of a visit to the seats of a dogen exemption boards was the wail of a baby in the arms of an East Side mother who by signs and a jargon all mother who by signs and a jargon al her own was trying to make Board No 120, at Public School 116, 215 East Thirty-second street, understand that "my man Pietro" could not go to the war because of this very evident offspring and her own very determined

The whole hot, sweltering business was a trifle too much for the poor little mother to comprehend—except that her 'man Piedro' will not have to go away. And when the very patient doctor at the head of the board finally broke his rule and by easy stages of a sign lan guage led her to understand this she gave a cry, tried to grab his hand and anded up by smothering the protesting young offspring under a torrent of hugs and kisses.

Board Rooms Are Swamped.

In the district where high rents pre vail there was noticeably less crowding and bustle around the exemption board headquarters than in the thickly settled foreign populated East Side sections and in certain parts of Harlem and The Bronx and Brooklyn. In these latter zones only a small portion of those who registered on June 5 had secured their erial numbers on Friday, and as a con quence yesterday when the significance what was taking place had finally sifted into their understanding the jabbering; pushing crowds fairly swamped the board rooms. In most of the stations olicemen were on duty to hold the applicants in line and see that everybedy kept in his right place.

Socialists, extreme pacifists, anti-con-scriptionists and anti-everything else, who had openly expected and secretly hoped for violent outbreaks on the par of the young men who are to be selected to march behind the colors, must have put in many unhappy hours during the

Frankly there were no outbursts of any kind, and the only trouble or ex-citement worthy of reporting was the difficulty in finding a common tongue. Most of the stations had interpreters, but even an accomplished linguist had little change to sustain his reputation little chance to sustain his reputation when stacked up against the score and more strange and weird dialects of the

The boards were concerned only it giving out the serial numbers, but more than a little of their time was taken up with explaining in plain and fancy lan guage that each applicant would have to look up his own place in the drawing and that to date newspapers alone carried these lists.

Praised for Volunteer Aids.

All the officials and practically all the overworked and tired clerks were volunteer workers, so that criticism of iso-lated examples of stupidity can be freely forgiven and forgotten. Most certainly those who are trying to do their bi should be exempt from the large and free carping of "the other half" who are doing nothing but the kicking.

By late yesterday afternoon the greater majority of the boards had their lists of names, ranging from second 2.500 to well over 4,000, arranged it alphabetical order, with the serial num-ber opposite. As few, however, had failed to make this provision, and as a consequence the task of giving this in-formation to the never ending stream of applicants was made slow and arduous.

Lists' Are Posted Up.

Over at Public School 116, where Board 120 held forth and where the East Side mother and her fears for "her man Pietro" gave a little color to a hot, busy day, the officials had very laboriously posted up a list of all the thousands registering and their serial thousands registering and their numbers but carefully arranged them numerically instead of alphabetically. As a consequence crowds in the large entrance hall down stairs resembled greatly the milling of cattle just before a storm breads. By patience and main strength and awkardness one who could read could find his name and number alread could find his name and number, alshough only after a determined wading through the hundred and more sheets, but it could be done. Exemption Board No. 127, doing busi-ties night and day at Public School 73, 209 East Forty-sixth street, in the lick of the East Side, had most of its 702 registered names alphabetically listed and planed to a primary room's blackboards at 5 o'clock in the after-noon. No less than a dozen women and half a dozen babies—the highest class exemption excuses yet invented—were doing the searching for serial numbers in this particular room.

La Follette Attacks Conscription.

Senator La Follette was not so well satisfied with regard to the Hardwick amendment. He made it the occasion for a violent harangue against the entire conscription system of army organization.

Feeling that the boards ought to get together to discuss mutual problems and make an attempt to synchronize their labors they sent out a letter inviting all board members to meet in S. hool 32 on Friday night. Mr. Conkling wasn't notified, but hearing of the project he told the boards that they were too busy on Friday preparing for the draft drawing to take time off for discussion. The meeting was therefore postponed to Wednesday. Mr. Conkling says he thinks it will be a good thing if the boards do get together.
